A Holistic Approach to Education

Authored by renowned education expert Dr. Susan Johnson, 'Working With Kids, Families, and Their Schools' transcends traditional approaches to education by acknowledging the interconnectedness of children, their families, and their schools. Dr. Johnson emphasizes that effective collaborations go beyond occasional communication or isolated events, but rather require a fundamental shift in mindset and practice, where all stakeholders actively engage in decision-making, problem-solving, and support.

Evidence-Based Strategies and Real-World Examples

Drawing upon extensive research and years of practical experience, 'Working With Kids, Families, and Their Schools' is a treasure trove of evidence-based strategies and inspiring real-world examples. Educators will discover innovative techniques for engaging families in their children's learning, fostering positive relationships with students, and creating inclusive and welcoming school environments. Parents will gain invaluable insights into understanding their children's educational needs, advocating for their interests, and collaborating effectively with teachers and administrators.
